Suspicious Cat

“The reason I chose this art piece is because at the time when I drew it I was in the hospital. This piece makes me feel that I should always be aware of my surroundings, be suspicious when something doesn’t look right and be alert. I enjoy doing art because it gives me a chance to draw what I’m feeling.”

ArtWorks services children and young adults with chronic and life-threatening illnesses and their network of supporters by creating healing exhibitions that recognize the creative arts therapies as an integral component of the recovery process.
