New Partnership Provides Art Supplies to Pediatric Patients

A new art program for children in the intensive care unit has been launched in partnership with ArtWorks, a non-profit organization funded by the Naomi Cohain Foundation. The program, Surprise! Supplies, provides these children with craft materials and art supplies during their stay in the hospital. These supplies help children and their families nurture their creative spirits and help to lighten their stay in the hospital. A display board has also been set up in the unit for children to showcase their work. The program is provided by the Department of Therapeutic Recreation, Child Life, and Creative Arts Therapies.
